Subject line: Our Growing Taylor Morrison Home Funding Business

Financial Services Team Members,

On the heels of our announcement last week that Taylor Morrison has entered into a definitive agreement to acquire William Lyon Homes, I wanted to share a quick update about what the future combined business means to our mortgage and title operations. I understand there have been lots of questions, and we certainly have a lot of work and understanding ahead, but here are a few details we can share today.

As many of you know, William Lyon also has a mortgage company and title operations under the name of ClosingMark, which we are eager to integrate into our financial services operations—Taylor Morrison Home Funding and Inspired Title Services—at the closing of our acquisition of William Lyon. Doing so will dramatically expand our financial services operations by allowing us to add a west coast Core fulfillment center to support some of the positions that support mortgage, and better accommodate all time zones—something we've long aspired to do. When we welcome more highly skilled and talented team members into our organization at closing, we'll also enjoy growth opportunities for many of our current Taylor Morrison Home Funding and Inspired Title Services team members. In short, it's a tremendous opportunity for our business and our people.

With this growth, Tawn Kelley and the Taylor Morrison Home Funding and Inspired Title Services Leadership Teams will continue to lead the future combined businesses. Tawn and I are equally excited about this future growth of such an important function of our business. Taylor Morrison Home Funding has an incredible history and reputation in the industry, and there is so much to look forward to.

You can rest assured your leaders will share more details along the way as we gear up to welcome William Lyon into our Taylor Morrison family, and we will need your support in the integration planning, so please stay tuned. In the meantime, thank you for your unwavering commitment to our team.

Warmly,
Sheryl
